ANDREE RELIC
A GENUINE ONE

The North Pole Buoy Viewed By Experts.

Associated Press Dispatches by The Tribune's Special Leased Wire.

STOCKHOLM, Sweden, Oct. 2.—The buoy marked "Andree Polar Expedition," with an anchor attached, which was found September 9th on the north coast of King Charles's Island, by the master of the Norwegian cutter Martha Larsen, was opened yesterday in the presence of a number of experts and members of the Cabinet. It was found to be the so-called North Pole buoy which Andree had arranged to place if he succeeded in passing the pole.

LONG TIME IN FILING A WILL.

Mark Parish, of San Francisco, died on October 5th. Although the will has just been filed, the estate had already been administered upon. At the time of his death, he had no will, and his wife, Charles E. Dewey, who was granted letters of administration. The estate was appraised at $12,500. There were, however, various claims presented which exceeded the value of the estate. The widow, Jessie P. Eastman, was granted a homestead and yearly allowance, and the rest was divided among the heirs.

The will which was recently found gives the whole of the property to the widow, with the exception of fifty dollars from the library and a gold watch. A nephew, W. H. Eastman, and a niece, Mary P. Eastman, were given an equal share. The will also provided that a sum of $1,000 be given to the library, and a gold watch is also left to the nephew. No change will result from the filing of the will.

GO AFTER AGUINALDO.

It does not appear to have occurred to our patriotic proclamation ma kers that there is more than one side to work with. Why should they favor the Government at Washington with exclu sive attentions in the line of proclamation?
Just as for the novelty of the thing itself, it is not the side with which Aguinaldo and his seek to persuade him to end the war by calling off his Tagalog fighters? It takes two parties to keep up a quarrel. If the authorities at the capital are contumacious and ob durate, surely it need not be assumed that they are deaf to pleading requests from the Tagalog, the chameleons and idolaters here in America—Boston Globe.

The ball was dropped in the scrum and Whipple, snatching it from the ground, dashed over the goal with the score down. "Pete" Knaresburg kicked the goal.

PICNICS AT SHELL MOUND PARK, Sunday, October 8th—Vernon Bistrach of San Francisco, to 11 P. M.

MONDAY.....OCTOBER 2, 1899.

Dewey must be glad that it is nearly all over. Fifteen minutes of such excitement would be enough to try the nerves of most men, but to be at it day and night for the greater part of a week requires the constitution of a cigar store Indian to stand up under the strain.

It is rather odd to see England represented in an International yacht race by a ship called the Shamrock, painted green and escorted by the Erin. If she wins, Britannia's rallying of the waves will look something like the "Home Rule" for which Ireland has contended so long.

The State Board of Health is wisely endeavoring to establish a strict quarantine against small-pox on the southern frontier. Too many cases of the disease have been appearing hereabouts of late, and in addition to the watch on the Mexican line, every possible precaution should be taken in the various harbors. San Francisco is pretty well guarded, but quarantine regulations are practically unknown at most of the way ports.

WILL FIGHT IT OUT.

There seems no longer any doubt that the tension over the Transvaal will end in war, for the negotiations have ended in an absolute deadlock, with each side evidently determined not to budge an inch in favor of the other. England refuses to entertain any propositions save those she has advanced regarding the elective franchise and the termination of crushing monopolies, such as those of the dynamite and railroads, while, on the other hand, the sturdy burghers, speaking through President Kruger, decline to make the concessions, because they see in them the ultimate loss of their independence.

Neither side has wasted any time while the overtures have been in progress, for England has been hurrying troops to the Cape as fast as transports could be secured to take them, while in the Transvaal the field cornets have placed the entire fighting population under arms, and the Boers are rapidly mustering at projected points of attack. If it be true that with the aid anticipated from the Orange Free State there will be fully 50,000 burghers in the field, the English will be outnumbered considerably at the start, for even with all the regiments under orders centered in one army there would not be a fighting force of over 33,000. However, it is not likely that the entire Boer army will be called into action at once, and meantime England will hurry troops to the scene from every quarter of the globe as soon as it becomes certain that the issue is to be determined by force of arms.

The South African campaign will undoubtedly be conducted on entirely new lines to those of the last Boer war, for England was then taught a bitter lesson that she is certain not to forget. When a crack British regiment goes into action and fifteen minutes later is in full retreat with hundreds of its men and every officer above the rank of Lieutenant either killed or severely wounded, it shows that the enemy is entitled to the greatest of respect, especially as on the occasion in question only seventeen Boers were killed as against the hundreds of British. Where England made a mistake then, and where she will not do so now, was in underestimating the enemy. The burghers are, in some ways, the most dangerous fighters in the world, for every man is a sharpshooter and the configuration of the country is such that a few thousand of them can almost stand off an army. With every mountain pass occupied by determined men, fighting for their homes and armed with the best of weapons and an unlimited supply of ammunition, the advance of an army becomes nearly an impossibility. If it were a case of doing battle in the open it would be almost child's play for the English, with their well-drilled, well-disciplined forces operating against volunteers, but as the burghers never give opportunities in that way and carry on a campaign absolutely on the lines of mountain-warfare, it is a different proposition altogether.

It seems strange that right on the heels of the Peace Congress strife should be occasioned over matters to which every principle advocated at The Hague conference could be applied, and it proves once more that theory and practice are almost repellent quantities.

THE POWDER EXPLOSIONS.

With four more lives blotted out by an explosion at the Pinole Powder Works, and three deaths occasioned but two or three days before by a similar catastrophe at the Santa Cruz works, the question naturally arises can nothing be done to prevent the awful loss of life that is annually occasioned by powder making? Despite the grim experiences of each disaster there does not appear to be any lesson conveyed by which there can be an avoidance of such accidents in the future, for after an immunity for but a few months the horror is repeated and more lives blown into eternity.

One of the greatest troubles regarding these powder explosions is the impossibility of detecting the actual cause of them, for all the evidence that could otherwise be obtained is destroyed by the wrecks the workmen employed in the particular department where the accidents occur being either killed or else they were fortunate enough to have been out of the building when the explosion took place. It stands to reason, though, that with the memory of former disasters before them and a full knowledge of the hazardous nature of their employment, the utmost care and caution would be observed by those engaged in the rooms where the nitro-glycerine is handled.

Either, therefore, some defect must exist in the system pursued in the manufacture of dynamite and powder, or else there is faulty machinery or an improper arrangement as to heating, drafts, and so forth. It certainly seems as if there is a good reason to overhaul the various powder factories and find out just where the trouble lies, for although the companies undoubtedly attribute the mishaps to the negligence or carelessness of their employees, such a solution is not reasonable when everything is taken into consideration. The loss of life in the powder factories in this section during the few years they have been established doubtless reaches into the hundreds, and what is more, there will assuredly be as many sacrifices in the future if everything is permitted to run exactly on the existing lines. There is a screw loose somewhere, and in the interests of humanity the most thorough investigation should be made with the object of terminating the trouble if possible. The Coroner's Jury is in the best position to set the ball rolling, for it should not be satisfied with merely returning a verdict as to how the men lost their lives, but should also insist upon a rigid scrutiny of the prevailing methods of powder making.

For once John Bull has to bow his head in shame for those stilling under the Union Jack. The dreadful atrocities of the seamen who, when the Scotsman was sinking, robbed fainting and dying women rank about with those of the sailors of the Bourgogne who struck down and trampled upon women and children during the rush for the lifeboats. Such wrecks are not entitled to be considered as men, but should rather be classified with wild beasts of prey. It is a pity that the officers did not shoot them down then and there and thus end the lives of such human jackals.

It must have been a powerful as well as a daring gun of criminals that created the great panic in the New Orleans cotton market last week. Investigation shows that the manipulators had obtained control of the cables, and then sent in reports that set the whole world astir. The detectives should not have a very hard job finding out who was at the back of it all. Let them get the names of the brokers and big dealers who benefited by the scare, and they will have a good start on the right road.

The University of Chicago is going to confer the title of Doctor of Laws upon Dewey. The faculty is probably figuring just as much on the honor to be obtained by the Institution in getting his name on its rolls as it is upon the glory it is conferring upon the Admiral by giving him a title that from an educational standpoint he has no particular right to.

The capacity of the loving cup presented to Dewey is four quarts. This should not be considered a criticism on the Admiral's thirst, but rather an indication of what is considered the right thing by the Tammany men who gave the order.

The Boers say they expect to win their fight with England. It will be a left-handed victory, then, for if the war once starts up they will only be able to obtain peace again by granting just what John Bull sees fit to demand.

The San Francisco couple that selected an Oakland shoe store to be married in may have been inspired to do so through those "souls" with a single thought. The surroundings should leave a "lasting" impression on them.

Mayor Jones of Toledo, who is running as an independent in the Gubernatorial race in Ohio, is a Welshman. That accounts for the vast quantity of "taffy" at his disposal.
